HEROIC RESCUE

Of Helpless Women And Children From a Rabid Dog.

Wallace West Risks His Life In a Single Handed Combat With a Mad Dog.

There are heroes besides those who face death on the field of battle. Sometimes they come to the front in the every day walks of life. Few who read of the brave deed recorded in this article, will hesitate to accord to Wallace West the meed of praise that belongs only to those of noble souls and heroic mold.

Last Sunday morning as the little country Sunday school at Bennetts-town was in session, the children busy with their lessons and the teachers with the minds on sacred things, a strange dog appeared in the open door. He was a large shepherd dog with bloodshot eyes, frothing mouth and suffering from the horrible convulsions of hydrophobia. With vicious snarls he began a ferocious attack upon the children nearest the door.

Pandemonium reigned. Women shrieked, children screamed, old and young, stricken with terror, fled for their lives, only to find themselves helpless to escape. Meanwhile the dog was snapping right and left, chasing the people over the benches. Cried with fear, strong men lost their heads and the instinct of self preservation was uppermost in the minds of all. No, not all, for one young man placed himself between the rabid beast and his would-be victims and gave battle. Agile, strong and courageous, he leaped from side to side, eluding the vicious snarls until seizing a favorable opportunity he jumped upon the dog and closed his iron grip upon the back of his neck. Holding him at arms length, he dragged the dog towards the door and out of the house, while a man was sent hurriedly to secure a pistol. Choked into helpless submission, the dog was held until the weapon was secured and Mr. West placed it to the creature's head and shot him to death. His bravery and presence of mind saved the whole school, for no one was bitten, although there were many very narrow escapes.

It is not known how many other dogs were bitten, before the mad animal reached the church.

Mr. West is a young farmer of the Church Hill neighborhood.

SAW HIS SWEETHEART

And the Old Man Took a Crack At Him With a Pistol.

Young Dr. Pinner, of Weaver's Store, Tenn., has for sometime been in love with Miss Sartin, daughter of the merchant at that place. Mr. Sartin has looked with disfavor upon the love affair and has been trying to break it up but without success.

Recently he notified Dr. Pinner that his attentions must cease or there would be trouble. But Joe laughs at angry parents as well as locksmiths and he held another meeting with his sweetheart, despite the threats of the old man. Then they met Wednesday and sure enough Papa Sartin produced a weapon and attempted to give the doctor a job of picking bullets out of his own body. One shot was fired, but the aim was not "Sartin" and the ball went wild. Before the irate parent could shoot again, bystanders interfered and stopped him.

ELIZABETHTON.

Almost Destroyed by Sudden Flood.

Hundreds Homeless And Relief Asked From Outside Cities And Towns.

Knoxville, Tenn., May 24.—Reports from Upper East Tennessee indicate that the high water in all the rivers is receding. Elizabethton, the wrecked, town presents a terrible spectacle, and the faster the water disappears the more serious becomes the situation. The Doe river has changed its course and is now running through the residence section, over the ruins of many homes. Some of the finest farms in that vicinity have been swept of their soil and barren rocks appear. Railroad communication was restored today between Johnson City and Elizabethton, over the East Tennessee & Western North Carolina railroad. The towns of Elizabethton and Butler have been more or less devastated. All the stores in the former place were swept away and 1,000 are without food. A train of men afoot left Elizabethton this morning with supplies for these towns.

The large mill of Savage & Tyler, of Knoxville, at Elizabethton, was totally destroyed.

Another dead body was found at Milligan below Elizabethton, last night. It is of a woman, and is unidentified. This brings the dead up to fourteen.

Citizens of Knoxville held a mass-meeting this morning to raise a relief fund. Six hundred dollars was subscribed, and more is being secured. Lee Miller, Chairman of the Relief Association at Elizabethton, wires:

"Outside aid will be a God-send."

The Tennessee river here reached thirty-five feet yesterday, and has been falling since. The steamer Omega here was totally destroyed late in the afternoon.

A Famous Apple Tree.

The American Cultivator says that the original greening apple tree still stands on the farm of Solomon Browne at Mount Hygeia, North Foster, R. 1. The tree was a very old one when the farm was sold in 1801. The seller informed the purchaser that it was a pity the old tree was going into decay, as it produced the best fruit of any tree in the orchard. The purchaser determined to see how long he could keep it alive, and it still survives, after almost another century has been added to its venerable years. But it shows signs of final decay, and the parent of all the famous Rhode Island greenings, which has set its grafts on the orchards of almost all the world, will soon be out a neighborhood memory. It is doubtful if there is a more famous apple tree to be found in all Pomona's groves from end to end of the earth.

How to Clean Laces—Wash Ribbons, Gloves, etc.

By Request.
It is one thing to possess things

(especially pretty dainty ones) and then dry on the bottle. It will look another to keep them in order. Yet like new. These are economical with a little energy and care it can methods.

To clean your gloves—keep on hand a bottle of gasoline (5 cents worth) and pour a little of it in a bowl and take several pairs of light ones at a time and wash them out in the gasoline out doors—and dry them in the open air; some wash them by putting them on, and let dry on hands. White gloves can be washed beautifully this way.

If you have soiled laces, put some magnesia in a piece of paper, lay the lace upon it, sprinkle more magnesia on it, then cover with another piece of paper and put a book or weight over it to press it then leave it for several days; then remove and blow all the powder off. It will be perfectly clean. When it is necessary to wash lace—sew it upon a strip of white muslin and roll it tight around a smooth glass bottle and fasten securely; then make a good cleaning suds of warm rain water and perline and drop the bottle into the suds, and leave for several hours—take out and rinse;

A Clean Cellar.

Written for the HOPKINSVILLE KENTUCKIAN By S. H.

We should do good to our sister housekeepers and in writing urge the busy over-worked wife and mother to consider the health of the family first, and above all to look out for herself, to not make a nervous wreck of herself. We expect a clean cellar in the home of a good housekeeper, but I know by experience that we forget to have it aired as often as it should be. No doubt much of the malaria in families arise from the neglect of the cellar. The cellar air penetrates through doors and living room and hence we need to be so careful. The doors and walls should be swept this time of the year—then white-washed. To keep it pure and healthy put in an iron vessel, unaltered time with a lump of charcoal in it and wash the walls with a weakened solution of copperas water.

ten along this line of disinfecting and purifying the cellar. Another good method is, after cleaning in every nook and corner, throwing away all refused matter, making clean as your own room, sprinkle hands full of borax around the barrels, boxes and edges of walls. It keeps away roaches and other insects etc., and disinfects and purifies every place. This can should be let in freely also—When there is a furnace, all the dampers and registers should be closed before sweeping. As a sanitary measure, it is well to call in the furnace man, to have the pipes and furnace itself examined cleaned and repaired. When it is practicable, open all the windows to the Cellar, and let the air draw through and sweeten and purify the under domain. I consider this one of the most important points in housekeeping. The drain and water pipes and the cellar kept clean, one can only enjoy life and being when they are well.

When a man and a woman become husband and wife they are joined together for a strenuous life.

A gentleman is a human being combining a man's courage and a woman's tenderness.

"The blood is the life." Science has never gone beyond that simple statement of Scripture. But it has illuminated that statement and given it a meaning ever broadening with the increasing breadth of knowledge. When the blood is "bad" or impure it is not alone the body which suffers through disease. The brain is also clouded, the mind and judgment are affected, and many an evil deed or impure thought may be directly traced to the impurity of the blood. No one can be well balanced in mind and body whose blood is impure. No one can have a wholesome and pure life unless the blood is pure. Foul blood can be made pure by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. When the blood is pure, the brain is able healthy and life becomes a daily happiness.

CHASED BY THREE LIONS.

Hunter in Rhodes Has a Nerve Racking Adventure.

It falls to the lot of but few men to come so near to a violent death and yet escape unharmed as was the case with Mr. J. A. Smith, who had been working as a mechanical engineer at the Inez, since the Herald. Having finished the work for which he had been engaged, he left the Inez, intending to cycle into Salisbury, stopping for a couple of days at the Great Bear. He left the latter place for Gadzima, traveling along the line of railway extension. On reaching the spot where the line crosses the Unfuli river, he found, as the bridge is not yet erected, that he would have to go round by the deviation and cross at the railway drift. This necessitated wading through the river and carrying the bicycle on his back.

On reaching the level again he put his machine down in order to resume his boots and socks, and, feeling rather fatigued after his exertions, staid for a brief rest. While enjoying the rest his attention was drawn by a troop of very fine sable—two magnificent bulls and three cows—making their way up from the other side of the river in the direction of a fringe of forest beyond. Feeling sufficiently refreshed, he picked up his machine, preparatory to starting again for Gadzima, where he wished to reach before it became dark. The next moment Mr. Smith received a shock which he will not forget for many a long day. About 50 yards away and slightly to his right were three lions, so intent on stalking the sable that they were not looking in his direction.

It was an awkward position, to say the least, and for a brief space he stood like one petrified, but, although his limbs were numb, his mind was active enough. The largest of the three was a huge black-maned lion, the second was a lioness, while the third was an almost full grown cub. The latter was the first to observe Mr. Smith and, uttering a low growl, making the unhappy man, who, dropping his bicycle, staid not on the order of his going, but went for a friendly tree at top speed. He had just time to notice that the parent lions had started in the wake of their young hog-fall, the sight, as may be imagined, only serving to increase his uneasiness. The lioness was a short distance away, but to the hunted it appeared a mile, expecting every second to be struck down. It was destitute of branches for about ten feet up, and how he managed to climb it at all will forever remain a mystery to him. Just as he thought himself safe, however, there was a terrible roar behind him, and he had an uneasy feeling that he was being dragged off the tree. The lion, outstripping his mate in the chase, had made his spring, missing his quarry by a few inches only. Even as it was, his huge claws tore away the greater part of Mr. Smith's trousers and inflicted several fairly deep scratches—and a raw rose ended in a raw wound.

Exhausted and panting, trembling in every limb, with the perspiration streaming out of him, he managed to draw himself upon into comparative security, and here for nearly an hour he remained in this dreadful position, while the baffled lion, now joined by the lioness, raged below, every now and again making frantic springs, when their field breath came so unpleasantly near as to almost bring on nausea. The tree, it should be mentioned, was a small maponda, about 18 feet high.

At first Mr. Smith could not understand what had become of the young lion, which went for him first, and but for the fact that he was not in a position to appreciate the humor of the thing, he witnessed a sight which must have been comical in the extreme, though to him it was a fearful one. The lioness, it seems that Leo junior stopped half way to examine the bicycle, which had been flung down hastily, with the result that the front wheel was left revolving. This arrested the young lion's attention, and, like a child with a new toy, he turned aside to examine this curious phenomenon. Cautiously giving it a pat with one of his huge paws, which only made it go round faster, his wonder increased, and he sat down on his haunches regarding it with a puzzled air, and not for some time did he join the parent couple at the foot of the tree, but to him he had "mouthed" the machine considerably and twisted the handlebar. During the tenure of his unpleasant perch Mr. Smith cast many wistful glances in the direction of his double-barreled gun, which was strapped to his bicycle, but it did not cover some place of retreat as soon as the lions should retire, and, to his great joy, saw a hut some 300 yards away. Just before dark his captor began to pay his attention to him and, seeing the sable again in the vicinity by aid of a strong breeze, he left after about three-quarters of an hour, to the extreme relief of their unfortunate prisoner. After waiting for about half an hour, until everything was quiet, he cautiously descended, and, not daring to go back for his gun, fearfully made his way to the hut referred to, making quick sprits from tree to tree. There was no roof, and the hut was but a flimsy structure, but, after making the entrance as secure as possible and kindling a big fire, he soon dropped off to sleep. At daybreak he was able to resume his journey, eventually reaching Gadzima and Salisbury little the worse, beyond a very natural nervous shock, for his thrilling experience.

WHEN HE WAS YOUNG.

Bartholomew Overcame Himself Before the Maiden Aunt.

"I was a good deal younger and great deal more bashful when I happened to meet the aunt here to whom my suavity, says the Milwaukee Sentinel, 'but that only made it worse for me, and looking back I wonder now that I lived through the agonies of the moment. I was in love, desperately, madly, with a pretty little girl who lived with a maiden aunt of the typical maiden aunt type. never had any objection to the old lady, who was always particularly nice to me, or rather was nice up to a certain evening when I went to call on my sweetheart. According to the usual custom, the aunt bent over me at the end of a good time when something dropped—dropped with a mill that was distinctly audible. Boy, like, I was anxious to be of assistance and noticing a look of distress on the aunt's face I plumped down on my knees and began to search. She begged me to stop, but I assured her in my politest tones that it was no trouble, and that I was only too glad to be of service. That was the truth. The greater her distress became, the more determined I was to be a missing article and restore it to its owner. As I look back at it now, I realize that this was a selfish what I did not want me to do, but at the time I laid her agitation merely as anxiety for the thing she had lost. So on my hands and knees, with the aunt trying to block my every movement, I prowled around among the chairs until I found it. Even then, being young and inexperienced, I did not know enough to conceal the fact of my success. I treasured for it, arose in triumph, extended my hand and gave it back to its owner—a set of false ivory teeth."

AN UNANSWERED QUESTION

Woman on Witness Stand Successfully Examined.

It is not an ordinary lawyer who can overcome a woman's reluctance to tell her age, as the following failing proves.

"And what is your age, madam?" was his question.

"My own," she answered, promptly. "I understand that, madam; but how old are you?"

"I am not old, sir," with indignation.

"I beg your pardon, madam. I mean, how many years have you passed?"

"None; the years have passed me."

"How many of them have passed you?" the lawyer went on, testily.

"All. I never heard of them stopping."

"Madam, you must answer my question. I want to know your age."

"I don't know that the acquaintance is desired by the other side."

"I don't see why you insist upon refusing to answer my question," said the lawyer, coaxingly. "I am sure I would tell you how old I was, if I were asked."

"But nobody would ask you, for everybody knows you are old enough to know better than to be asking a woman her age, so there!"

And the vanquished one passed on to the next question.—London Tit-Bits.

Where Three Countries Meet.

Doubtless the most unique spot in Europe is the little village of Alenquer, where on its border three countries meet. It is ruled by no monarch, has no soldiers, no police and no taxes. Its inhabitants speak a curious jargon of French and German combined, and spend their days in cultivating the soil.

The Presidential train reached Washington yesterday after a brief
stop at Canton.

The Court of Appeals has refused grant a further delay in the case

According to an opinion delivered by the Court of Appeals, the as-to public policy and is void.

After being given permission by

Nothing Tastes Good

And eating is simply perfunctory—done because it must be.

This is the common complaint of the dyspeptic.

If eating sparingly would cure dyspepsia,
few would suffer from it long.

The only way to cure dyspepsia, which is difficult digestion, is to give vigor and tone to the stomach and the whole digestive system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla cured the niece of Frank Fay, 100 N. St., South Boston, Mass., who writes that she had been a great sufferer from dyspepsia for six years; had been without appetite and had been troubled with sour stomach and headache. She had tried many other medicines in vain. Two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla made her well.

The Confederate Reunion at Memphis was too big for that city to handle and many of the Christian county veterans returned home at the end of the first day, being unable to get any place to sleep or anything to eat. It is estimated that there were 100,000 visitors in the city, about 50,000 more than any provision had been made to care for.

The Court of Appeals, in a case from Louisville, has decided that municipal officers have no legal right to compromise tax cases. The decision may effect about 1,000 cases of tax compromise made in Louisville during the past two or three years, as well as thousands made by other cities with banks and other corporations. Nearly all of the back taxes due from banks were adjusted by compromise and the re-opening of these cases would cost the banks a great deal.

The weed offered was in good con-

AN ACCOMPLISHED CUBAN

Eulogizes Peruna as an Efficacious Catarrh Cure.

Gonzalo De Quesada, Secretary of the Cuban Legation in Washington.

Senor Quesada, Secretary of the Cuban Legation in Washington, is an orator born. In an article in The Outlook for July, 1888, by George Kennan, an orator Quesada speak at the Esteban Theatre, Matanzas, Cuba, he said: "I have seen many audiences under the spell of eloquent speech and in the grip of strong emotional excitement, but I have rarely witnessed such a scene as at the close of Quesada's eulogy upon the dead patriot, Martí." In a letter to The Peruna Medicine Company, written from Washington, D. C., Senor Quesada says:

"Peruna I can recommend as a very good medicine.
It is an excellent strengthening tonic, and it is also an efficacious cure for the almost universal complaint of catarrh."

Peruna does not operate upon the system as the usual remedy does. It is not a local treatment. It operates as a systemic remedy. It gives tone to the weakened nerve centers, and thus gives tone to the mucous membranes that line

the various organs of the body.

Catarrh is always located in some mucous membrane. Catarrh is a faulty condition of the blood vessels of these membranes. Peruna gives tone to these vessels and restores them to their natural elasticity.

Miss Martha Whitkop writes from Greenville, Mich., the following: "When I began your treatment I had catarrh of the head, nose, throat, stomach and pelvis organs. I was troubled with hawking and spitting, caught cold very easily, had almost constant headache. My stomach was all out of order, I did not sleep well, and was more tired in the morning than when I retired. I had backache and was very nervous, in fact, the catarrh had permeated my entire system, and I almost despaired of getting well."

"I wrote you for advice and you advised Peruna. I began to gain right along, and am now well. My parents praise Peruna very much. As for myself, I can't speak well enough of it. I am well and happy and enjoy my life as I never have before. I cannot remember when I have felt as well as I do now."

Congressman J. H. Blackburn, of Alabama, one of the most influential members of the House of Representatives, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., gives his endorsement to the great

catarrh remedy,

Peruna, in the following words:

"Your Peruna is one of the best

medicines I ever tried, and no family should be without your remuneable remedy."

As a tonic and a catarrh cure I know of nothing better."

A Very Remarkable Remedy.

"It is with a great deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the medicine exposed for sale on my show case, said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever." Sold by all druggists.

CLIMATIC CHANGES.

A Popular Edition that is Not Born Out by Other Records.

"Ninety-nine middle-aged people out of a hundred would take a solemn oath that there has been a gradual change in the climate since their youth," said a gentleman of New Orleans who takes an interest in meteorology, speaking with a Time-Democrat writer. "They are positive that the winters have been growing continually milder and shorter, and that the present summers are equally modified as compared to the summers of the past. Hardly any old inhabitants agree as to the exact character of the change that has taken place, but that there has been a change of some kind and that the seasons now exhibit marked and striking differences over the seasons of a quarter of a century ago, is something about which they are as certain as of the fact that they are alive. Moreover, this belief is not confined to old inhabitants or even folks of middle age, but, as far as my observation goes, it is held by the public generally—at least it is one of those things that are accepted without question as self-evidently true. Now, in view of all this," continued the amateur meteorologist, "it may surprise you to know that there is not a lot of evidence in the official records for a climatic change has taken place in any part of the country during the last 30 years, which is the period covered by our modern weather bureau observations. For that length of time we have exact data as to temperature, rain and snowfall and nearly every other existing condition, and the record shows an average that has been absolutely uniform. Occasionally there will be an abnormally cold winter, that will be offset by a winter that is abnormally warm; and, taking one year with another, we have almost exactly the same number of pleasant and inclement days at present that we had back in the seventies. The average winter is no earlier, no shorter and no milder than it was when our middle-aged friends were school children. It is the same old winter. Ditto summer. I know this assertion will be received with incredulity," added the amateur meteorologist, "but it is borne out by the evidence. If you are skeptical send for a government report. It isn't the climate that has been changing; it is the old inhabitant himself."

A QUEER WEDDING.

Neither Bride Nor Groom Had Ever Seen a Railway.

"I witnessed a marriage the other day in which the bride and groom both live within 50 miles of Washington, yet neither have ever seen a steam or electric car, said a drummer to a Washington Star reporter. "You will no doubt be surprised when I tell you there are hundreds of people living over in Virginia who have never been to town." But to the marriage. During a recent trip one of the friends of the groom met me in a country store and cordially extended an invitation to take a drive across country to witness the 'hitchin' I very gladly availed myself of the opportunity and we arrived at our destination in good time. The neighborhood was well represented, the male contingent being congregated in the barn, where a barrel of hard cider was on tap. We were soon notified that the ceremony was about to take place, and we all filed into the 'best' room. I shall never forget the appearance of the contracting parties. The groom was an undersized though powerfully-built young fellow. He was dressed in a pair of jean overalls, a stiff shirt, no collar, a fancy old-time vest, but no coat. The bride, who was at least six feet in height, was dressed in a calico wrapper, a piece of pink ribbon around her neck, a little old-fashioned bonnet on her head, but barefooted. After the ceremony the happy couple received the congratulations of the assembled company, every man and woman present kissing the bride. Pretty soon one of the guests brought out a violin and dancing was indulged in the rest of the evening. When I expressed my surprise that the bride should be barefooted I was told that there were lots of women in that section that had never known what it was to wear shoes."

Tree as Air Purifier.

There is nothing like a tree to keep air pure, remarks a scientist. Its leaves decompose carbonic acid. The volume of carbonic acid exhaled by a human being in 24 hours is roughly estimated at 100 gallons. If a single tree of moderate size were growing where a dozen, or even as many as 20, men were sleeping, the purifying action of the leaves would insure that the air was kept quite fresh.

HORSE IN A PANIC.

Flung by Its Human Burden Into the Fire.

"It's the hardest thing in the world to get horses out of a burning barn," said an old liverman of New Orleans to a Time-Democrat writer, "but, after all, there is nothing very mysterious about their reluctance to leave. You see, a horse still stands for all a horse knows about security. It is his refuge from the dangers and distractions of the street, and it is only natural that he should associate with it a strong idea of safety. So when everything around him is hubbub and excitement and a glare of flames, he will rush instinctively to that one spot and stick right there until he burns. I have seen scores of cases of that kind—in my time," the old liverman went on, "the most terrible and dramatic of them all was something that happened at Louisville, very shortly after the close of the war. A great deal of government stock was being auctioned off there at that period, and my brother and I were making the city temporarily our headquarters, picking up anything good we could see. Among other bargains that I secured was a magnificent gray saddle horse I called Major, after the federal officer who had owned him. He was a superb creature, full of spirit, but so kind and affectionate that we fell in love with him at once and determined to hold him for our personal use. We kept him, with a few other choice animals, in a large stable near the river, run by the Ogden Brothers. Late one night the stable caught on fire, and almost from the outset it was plain that the whole place was doomed. We lived near by, and got there among the first. The fire was then eating its way through the lofts on the second floor, which made it very dangerous for anybody to venture into the large central inclosure where the stalls were located, as there was no telling at what moment the blazing upper structure would come down. The main entrance to the stallroom was through a runway, or big covered passage, fully 60 feet long, and out of this some of the hands succeeded in bringing a few horses. My brother and I were standing near by, grieved to the heart at the thought of losing Major, when we happened to notice a 15-year-old colored boy, who was a hanger-on about the stable and particularly fond of the beautiful gray 'Petie,' said my brother, 'I'll give you $50 if you can get Major to come out.' Stable hands were still scurrying to and fro through the passage, and without saying a word, the boy lowered his head and dashed in. Then followed what seemed to me an hour of suspense, and I had just about given up hope of ever seeing boy or horse when Major suddenly loomed up at the end of the runway, with Pete on his back. They came down at a gallop and were easily within 20 feet of the door when we heard a crash like a clap of thunder and the stallroom behind burst instantly into a mass of flame. The loft had just gone down, and Major stopped so suddenly at the sound that he almost fell over on his back. He reared straight up in the air, with the little negro wrapped around his neck like a reel, and took two or three prancing steps, exactly as trained horses do in riding schools. 'Jump! you blamed fool! Jump!' yelled my brother; but Pete was either afraid to risk it or thought he could still get through, and at the next instant, to our horror and amazement, the scared gray wheeled like lightning and dashed straight for the burning stallroom. I had a plain view of them as he leaped headlong into the flames, but the strangest picture and the one I retain most clearly in my mind is that of the big horse rearing in the runway, with poor Pete clinging for dear life to his neck, and that horrible fiery furnace for a background! It is as distinct to me now as it was next morning. My brother reproached himself bitterly afterward, but what was the use! You can't measure such risks in advance."

Sherlock Holmes II

A detective was recently employed by one of London's West end clubs to discover a certain pilferer who had caused much annoyance to the members by helping himself to cigars and other articles from their overcoat pockets. The disciple of Sherlock Holmes smeared a number of cigars with aniline dyes, placed them in the pockets of several overcoats and next morning, carefully scrutinized the mouths of the club servants, with the result that the culprit was found and persuaded to confess.

SECOND--The vital question of repairs cuts a big figure. We have kept repairs for the Deering for years and will continue to do so. Break a brand new binder* even and it is worthless unless repairs are within reach.
